

1. Which is an example of humans interacting with their environment? Choose the best answer.

- Inuit tribes of the Arctic who depend on fishing for survival.
- Someone eating a fish sandwich for lunch at a fast-food restaurant.
- A taxidermist who is paid to stuff and mount fish caught by sportsmen.
- A town council raising the cost of a fishing license from $5 to $10.

2.  If you lived in Los Angeles, California, what region would you be a part of?

- The greater San Francisco area
- The Eastern Hemisphere
- South America
- The West Coast of the United States

3.  Which of the following is a true statement about the equator?

- It influences weather patterns around the world.
- It divides the earth into the northern and southern hemispheres.
- It separates the earth into degrees of latitude and longitude.
- It is the location of earth's magnetic poles.

4. In terms of geography, which of the following is an example of movement?

- A father driving his car to the grocery store to buy diapers.
- A businesswoman commuting to work every morning.
- Immigrants traveling from Asia to the United States.
- A family taking a vacation to Florida.

5. Which of the following is an example of a physical characteristic of a region?

- A mountain range located within that region.
- A sports team that everyone in the area roots for.
- The language that's spoken in that region.
- The jobs that are available in that region.

6. How is the region known as the "New York tri-state region" different from the region known as "the Muslim world?"

- People in the New York region speak many different languages; people in the Muslim world do not
- People in the New York region move around a lot; people in the Muslim world don't
- People in the New York region do not interact with their environment; people in the Muslim world do
- The New York region is a geographical place; the Muslim World is a cultural region

7. The United States is ethnically and geographically diverse. What does this mean?

- There are many different physical and cultural features in the country
- The weather changes frequently as you travel across the country
- Compared to other countries, the U.S. is extremely large
- Most people in the United States live in cities or suburbs and speak English

8.  The lines on the following map are known as:

- Equators and meridians
- Latitude and longitude
- Earth coordinates
- The x axis and the y axis

9. Which of the following is a factual statement about place?

- It cannot be pinpointed by latitude and longitude
- The environment has no impact on it
- It varies depending on the seasons
- It depends on the physical and cultural characteristics of a location

10. What are the major themes of geography?

- People, places, things, and locations.
- Latitude, longitude, temperature, and humidity.
- Location, place, region, movement, human-environment interaction.
- Time zone, rainfall, population, and language.